G                                  C
My mind knows full well I should leave here
D7                                 G
But my heart my foolish heart will not turn
                                  C
She fills me with a crazy wild desire
          G          D7                  G
And lying helpless I know just how I'll burn

            D7             C                   G
Back in the fire  where my heart must long to be
                    A7                        D7
If it wasn't so then why oh why does it keep dragging me
            C             G             C
Back in the fire  to the flames of ecstasy
             G            D7                   G
I guess I'll always love  the way she burns in me

                               C
At times I've gone as far as believing
D7                                 G
This tortured soul of mine was finally free
                                  C
Then those long silent leftover feelings
         G                    D7               G
Say I'm a pretender and I'll surrender willingly
