I'm Beginning To Forget-Marty Robbins

```
G                                D7
I think that I'm beginning to forget you
                                                 G
And I should because I tried with all my might
                                 D7
I think that I'm beginning to forget you
                                                  G
Cause I only cried a little bit last night

                                 D7
I think that I'm beginning to forget you
                                               G
I think or maybe it just seems that way
                                 D7
I think that I'm beginning to forget you
                                               G
Cause I only read your letters once today

D7                             G
Lately I hardly think about you
A7                               D7
Unless I'm by myself or with a friend
G                                D7
I think that I'm beginning to forget you
                                                   G
Cause I only kiss your picture now and then
```

Repeat #3