I've Learned To Live With You And Be Alone-Jean Shepard
Author:Ira Louvin and Charlie Louvin

```
G                            C          G
I have learned to live with you and be alone
      D7                                G
Every happiness we've ever shared is gone
                          C                  G
One of us must find the nerve to say if we both know it's wrong
                                 D7          G
Yes I've learned to live with you and be alone

   D7                                              G
If I stayed away the whole night through you would never call my name
A7                                 D7
No matter what I do you'd never ask me to explain
G                                  C           G
You don't miss my love you'd never even notice when I'm gone
                                 D7          G
I have learned to live with you and be alone

                         C                G
When I hold you in my arms I'm out of place
         D7                                    G
For your heart is gone it's written on your face
                         C            G
And we both refuse to walk away although we know it's wrong
                                 D7      G
I have learned to live with and you be alone
