G            D7                          G
It's just my luck to live when I'd much rather die
        D7                          G
I'd end my life but I don't have the nerve to try
           C                          G
You're not worth the salt in each new tear I cry
                        D7                 G
And it's just my luck to love someone like you

             D7                       G
It's just my luck to find I gave my heart away
             D7                         G
To a man who has no heart and treats me any ole way
         C                          G
My first bad luck came when I was born one day
                        D7                 G
And it's just my luck to love someone like you

           C                   D7                 G
Time after time this heart of mine you went and broke
     C                          A7              D7
Till love to me has come to be just a standing joke
G          C                          G
You're not worth the salt in each new tear I cry
                        D7                 C          G
And it's just my luck to love someone like you till I die
