Just married-Marty Robbins
Author: Al Allen

```
G                              C          D7
Just married this mornin' how happy they are
                             G
Just married written on the window of a-their car
                      C              D7
It broke my heart to see them drive away
                       G
I lost the one I love today

                                    C           D7
Dressed all in white satin white lace in her hair
                             G
She looked so lovely it was more than I could bear
                         C          D7
Some people guessed the way I felt inside
                                    G
They saw the tears I could not hide

  D7                            G
I should have stayed at home I knew what was in store
    C                             D7
But somethin' made me come  to see her just once more
     G                          C          D7
Just married this mornin' how happy they are
                             G
Just married written on the window of their car
                          C          D7
It broke my heart to see them drive away
                       G
I lost the one I love today

                                    C           D7
Dressed all in white satin white lace in her hair
                             G
She looked so lovely it was more than I could bear
                         C          D7
Some people guessed the way I felt inside
                                    G
They saw the tears I could not hide

  D7                            G
I should have stayed at home I knew what was in store
    C                             D7
But somethin' made me come  to see her just once more
     G                          C          D7
Just married this mornin' how happy they are
                             G
Just married written on the window of their car
                          C          D7
It broke my heart to see them drive away
                       G
I lost the one I love today
```