C                                G7
Everything that I say seems to upset you
                               C
When I try to tell you of my love
                      C7       F
Open your eyes don't tear us apart
               C        G7             C
Honey all that wrong is your stubborn heart

         F                   C
Stubborn heart you could be happy
         F                   G7
Stubborn heart you could be laughing
           C                 C7      F
We're like two lonely stars so far apart
                   C        G7             C
Honey all that is wrong as your stubborn heart

                                          G7
You have turned my lonely heart into a beggar
                                        C
When I tried to kiss you  you turn away
                        C7           F
I'm begging you now to make a new start
                   C        G7             C
Honey all that is wrong as your stubborn heart
