The Happiness Of Having You-Charley Pride
Author: Theodore Clifford Harris

```
C
The sun comes up and throws it's light
               F             C
Into my window catching me a-yawning

I persuade my eyes to open
             F                   C
And begin to realize that day is dawning

     F
Then I reach out and feel the warmth of you
                        C      F
Curled up beside me once again  mmm-mmm-mmm
C
It's the happiness of having you
     G7                                 C
That makes my world a place worth living in

As I leave to go and face the care
                  F               C
And worry of the day my heart is yearning

For the setting sun to tell me
          F                              C
That the day is done and I should be returning

   F
To you hold you close and kiss the lips
                                       C      F
That taste like heaven time and time again  mmm-mmm-mmm
C
It's the happiness of having you
     G7                                 C
That makes my world a place worth living in

As the doors of darkness close upon a day
                  F             C
That's been too long and too demanding

And I look into your gentle eyes
               F                       C
And find them filled with love and understanding

     F
That little tear of gladness finds it's
                          C      F
Way up to the surface once again  mmm-mmm-mmm
C
It's the happiness of having you
     G7                                 C
That makes my world a place worth living in

Yes it's the happiness of having you
     G7                                 C
That makes my world a place worth living in
